MINER KILLED AT PASSBURG.

Frank, Alta., Nov. 25—Joseph Diney,
a miner in the employ of the Leitch Collieries at its Passburg mine, met a violent death in an accident in the mine yesterday afternoon by falling down a chute. With his partner Diney was working at the face when some unaccountable manner, he fell into the chute. The partner saw a warning at once and assistance came quickly but when the unfortunate miner was reached and taken out, it was found he was dead from his injuries.

McLaren's Mill

The mill closed down on Friday last.

Villous Quiven went into camp on Monday last, he is operating 4 this year.

Miss Ritchie returned from Pincher Creek on Wednesday night, where she has been spending a few days.

Alfours and Mrs. Roberts, who have cared for the wants of the inmates this summer at the mill, moved out to camp 8 on Monday.

When a cold comes settled in the system, it will take several days' treatment to cure it, and the best remedy to use is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will cure quicker than any other, and also leaves the system
in a natural and healthy condition.
Sold by all dealers.

Lille Jottings

A Ladies Aid was also formed with a view of further assisting the work of the church in the camp and it is sincerely hoped that the efforts of the committee, assisted by the congregation will show excellent results in the near future.

Croup is most prevalent during the dry cold weather of the early winter months. Parents of young children should be prepared for it. All that is needed is a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many mothers are never without it in their homes and it has never disappointed them. Sold by all dealers.

Gorner F. M. Pinkney met with a very painful accident on Wednesday night last. Mr. Pinkney had been to Passburg holding an inquest and when returning home his horse slipped and fell on the ice, throwing the rider from its back, breaking his right arm near the shoulder. Mr. Pinkney immediately rode to the hospital at Frank, where Dr. Macdonald dressed the broken limb. He leaves hospital today, and we are pleased to say, is doing well.

A meeting of those interested in church work was called on Thursday afternoon for the purpose of organizing the business of the Presbyterian church on a more satisfactory basis than hitherto. Ladies present were:
Mrs. W. P. Williams, Mrs. Dr. Snyder,
Mrs. F. M. Pinkney, Mrs. E. Johnson, Mrs. F. Wright and Miss M. G. Nor-
don. Finance Committee was formed with Mrs. W. P. Williams, president, Mrs. F. Wright, sec-treas. It was resolved by those present to use their best efforts to secure sufficient support to guarantee the minister a stipend and one monthly an announcement to this effect to be made at the conclusion of divine service on Sunday evening.

R. R. Webb paid a short visit to Crow's Nest on Thursday in order to register his vote.

R. Sherwood was in Fernie on Thursday. He gave Mr. Harrington a helping hand.

Rev. Mr. Macdonald preached his opening sermon on Sunday evening in St. Alban's.

Carl Baunmer came up from Lundbrook to cast his vote in favor of incorporation.

There were three sales in our stores
last Saturday and Monday and all did an extremely good business.

O. N. Ross is having a large and up-to-date office fitted up in the Coleman hotel, as his business is rapidly growing.

Rev. Mr. McNeil preached to large and appreciative audiences at both services in the Institutional church on Sunday.

Mrs. F. G. Graham was seriously sick the few part of the week, but we are now pleased to say that she has somewhat recovered.

The Helping Hand Brotherhood
have agreed to take a collection the first Sunday after every pay-day.
The regular collection is ten cents per month.

J. A. McNeil who has removed to Calgary on Saturday evening. He exchanged pulpits with Rev. J. Mc-Neil on Sunday. Next Sunday Mr.

Murray will preach on "The Wine Failed." A solo "Will the anchor hold" will be sung.

The old, old story, told time without number, and repeated over and over again for the last 36 years, but it is always a welcome story to those in search of health—There is nothing in the world that cures coughs and colds
so quickly as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Sold by all dealers.

As long as Dan Scott remains as Robinson's promoter there is going to be friction in boxing circles. If Scott remains, the Coleman Miner would advocate that all boxing contests be forbidden as it will not stand to Coleman's credit to have such men promoting prizefights in our midst.

Dan Scott the erstwhile prizefighter and meat ticket slugger is still in town attending to affairs that could be de-tended to Coleman's advantage in other towns. Coleman sports are enthusiastic over Robinson but all shake dubious heads when the name of the lordly trainer is mentioned.

The smoker which is to be given under the auspices of the Fraternal Order of Eagles in the opera house on Saturday night promises to be a great success, as a large program has been arranged. Tables will be laid for over a hundred guests and after dinner speeches will follow the banquet.

L. A. Manly who just returned from a business visit to British Columbia points and Spokane, reports that the mining industry at Princeton and Hedley is thriving. The coal at Princeton is highly and is of a splendid quality while the gold prospected at Hedley is "payable" out better than expected. Mr. Manly returned to Grand Forks on Tuesday evening.

O. N. Ross Receives Con- tract For Removal Of Bluff

The information that the contract had been awarded for the demolin-ishment of the bluff came as very welcome news to the people of Coleman and west Coleman. There were four tenders submitted to the government and O. N. Ross of Fernie who is now head of the Coleman Cartage Co. was the successful bidder. The amount called for in the tender was $4,372.
The work of cutting will be commenced next Monday and will take about two months. The plans call for a road twenty-five feet wide but as there will be considerable filling in to do,
he will have to make the road thirty-five feet instead.

A narrow gauge railway will be used to transport the rock and earth and a culvert will be built across the creek in west Coleman. As the construction work will be close to the C. P. R.
black powder will have to be used.

ROBINSON SCORES A KNOCKOUT

The big boxing contest which was scheduled to go fifteen rounds ended abruptly in the seventh round. Our of the largest crowds ever gathered in Coleman to see a boxing contest was present in the opera house on Monday night to see these two gladiators spit for supremacy.

The preliminaries were certainly a full of class and drew tremendous crowds of applause from the audience.
Hogan, of Coleman, and the "Spoken Kid" sparred six rounds to a draw, while two Hillerest men fought four rounds in the second preliminary.
The husky principals in the main bout entered the ring at 10:30.
Wm. Burrows was chosen as referee and Andy Gaud and Percy Porter acted as assistant referees.

Robinson was an able man, O. N. Ross and Dan Lewis were appointed timekeepers.
At 10:40 the men faced each other and shook hands. The best by rounds is as follows:

Round 1. Both sparred for an opening for some seconds. Robinson led and landed on the Kid's jaw. Robinson led again, but the Kid side-stepped him. The men mix it and both exchange light blows and then clinch.
Robinson follows the Kid around thr-ing and jabs continually. Robinson's round.

Round 2. The Kid came up more determined and lands and lands a heavy blow on Robinson's face. Robinson swings but misses. Both spar and then clinch. The Kid slipped to the floor; and while there Robinson lands one in the ribs. The referee declare no foul. Five minutes rest was allowed. Cyclone Kid's round.

Round 3. Both men are fresh and spar rapidly. Cyclone lands again heavily on Robinson's jaw and puts him right up against the ropes, but he fails to follow it up. Robinson comes back dazed but countering every blow.
Cyclone tries to mix it. The men clinch. Cyclone's round.

Round 4. Robinson with his face bleeding follows his man around the ring and then swings a heavy right on the Kid's left eye. The Kid swings wildly and the men clinch. Robinson lands again on the sore eye and on the body. Robinson's round.

Round 5. Both men come up tired and spar most of this round. Robinson keeps playing for the Kid's sore eye and the Kid replies with weak jabs to the body. Round even.

Round 6. The Kid rushes at Robinson and after sparring for some seconds lands on Robinson's left eye.
Robinson comes back with a heavy left to body. The Kid drops repeat-ly and is a faint received a blow on the body. A foul was claimed but not allowed. The minutes rest is given.

Round 7. The men mix it from the start. The Kid swings wildly. Both exchange blows. Robinson follows his man to the ropes and lands on the jaw. The Kid is dazed. Robinson then lands on the solar plexus and the Kid takes the count.

A RECORD BREAKER

(From last week's Owlsey Chronicle.)

"Mater Mack," the well-known member of the Crow's Nest Pass, has broken all bad records in crop raising.
His oats averaged "two to the straw."
Mack is a hustler and intends keeping two extra head of hens this winter.

INCORPORATION OF COLEMAN

Freely Discussed in the Council
Chamber On Wednesday Night

The adjourned meeting of the ratepayers of Coleman was held in the council chamber on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock. In the absence of Mr. Cameron, W. L. Outinette was unanimously elected chairman of the meeting.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and approved, the chairman called on those present to continue the discussion of the motion to proceed with incorporation.

D. J. Hill was the first speaker. Mr.
Hill advocated that our water supply was inadequate and that if we did not incorporate and acquire another fountain, we would find ourselves in a most unenviable position. As a village we could not acquire or raise sufficient money to install a waterworks system. Our sewerage system was nil and it was only by incorporation that we could do away with our cess-pools and remove possible causes of contagious diseases.

O. R. S. Whiteside said that the question he had asked the previous evening was still unanswered and he would like to know if Coleman could put in her water works without incorporation.

L. Sellers, B. C. L. rose to answer this question. He said that the village could only borrow to the extent of $4,000 and that the waterworks would cost at least $20,000. As an incorporated town we could borrow this amount easily. Mr. Sellers also stated that the two-sided water supplied on all money by law was a safe-guard on any proposition that would require the ratepayers to contribute.

The attorney-general, who stated that the borrowing powers of a town were much greater than that of a village. Mr. Sellers then closed the discussion in regard to a new item on Fernie. This item showed that cess-pools had been the cause of an epidemic of fever and that the town was a heavy gainer through installing a water system.

Henry James again stated that he was opposed to incorporation at this time as we were still too young. Mr.
James stated that he believed we would be more careful of our sanitary conditions if we tried. He did not want to see the taxes raised.

D. J. Hill answered H. James by saying that the taxes would not be raised and that Fernie was an unfair example as they had been visited by four fires.

Mr. Hyslop followed and he went right after Mr. James. He contended that we would be far better off as an incorporated town and he quoted Glasgow as a good example of a city making use of her public utilities to reduce the taxes.

Prin. Acheson gave a very strong address and was followed closely by everyone. Mr. Acheson traced carefully the progress of science and claimed that we should be more alive to the question of public health. Progress depends on public spirit and it is the duty of every citizen to take an interest in the affairs of Coleman.
Mr. Acheson also declared that we should install a water works and called on all to support incorporation.

Councillor McDonald gave a very able speech in favor of incorporation and quoted the Lethbridge Herald as saying that Coleman would benefit by incorporation.

Henry Smith contended strongly that all property owners in "Blaytown" had a vote. He owned property there himself and was entitled to a vote.

F. Leary also spoke. He said if the cess-pools worked for $400.00 that he was a cheap guy. He also opposed incorporation as the taxes would be too high.

H. Gatz defended himself as Sanitary Inspector.

A. Macdonald produced figures which could not be disputed on the probable amount of taxes that could be levied.
The chairman then read the motion and called for a vote, but there was strenuous objection to some ratepayers as it was declared that some were not entitled to a vote. The chairman however justly decided that all having property would have a vote but that their names would be taken down and their vote annulled if it was found that they did not own property.
Upon a division it was declared that the incorporation motion had carried by a vote of 44 to 8.

MARRIERS' COMPASS.

Little Known of the Real Origin of the Instrument.

ITS USE BY THE CHINESE.

[This Wonderful People Knew of the Magnetic Needle Long Before the Christian Era—The Claims of Giola, the Pilot, and the Credit Due Him.

Much interest must ever attach to the discovery of that valuable instrument the mariner's compass, and yet there are few subjects concerning which less is known. For a period the honor of the invention was ascribed to Giola, a pilot, born at Padua, a small village situated near Anzio, about the end of the thirteenth century. His claims, however, have been discredited.

Much learning and labor have been bestowed upon the subject of the discovery. It has been maintained by one class that even the Phoenicians were the inventors, and that the Greeks and Romans had a knowledge of it. Such notions, however, have been completely refuted.

Our passage, nevertheless, of a remarkable character occurs in the works of Cardinal de Vity, bishop of Violema, in Syria. He went to Palestine during the fourth crusade, about the year 1294. He returned afterward to Europe, and subsequently back to the Holy Land, where he wrote his work entitled "Historia Orientalis," as nearly as can be determined, between the years 1210 and 1220. In chapter 11 of that work he has this singular passage:

"The iron needle, after contact with the lodestone, constantly turns to the north star, which, at the axis of the firmament, remains immovable while the others revolve, and hence it is essentially necessary to those navigating on the ocean."

These words are as explicit as they are extraordinary. They state a fact and announce a use. The thing, therefore, which essentially constitutes the compass must have been known long before the birth of Giola. In addition to this fact, there is another equally strong in its claim as the original discoverer.

It is now settled beyond a doubt that the Chinese were acquainted with the compass long before the European. It is certain that the Chinese had a knowledge of the magnetic needle in the traditional period of Chinese history, about 2,000 years before Christ, and a very recent discovery has shown that it was used in the reign of Ching-wang of the Chow dynasty, before Christ 1114.

It is, however, a mistake to suppose without the least implying the just claims of Giola to the gratitude of mankind. The truth appears to be that the position of Giola in relation to the compass was precisely that of Watt in relation to the steam engine—the element existed; he augmented its utility.

The compass used by the mariners in the Mediterranean during the twelfth and thirteenth centuries was a very uncertain and unsatisfactory apparatus. It consisted only of a magnetic needle floating in a vase or basin of water, and was so constructed that it would support it on the surface of the water.

The compass used by the Arabians in the thirteenth century was an improvement on the one just described. Now, the inconvenience and inefficiency of such an apparatus are obvious. The agitation of the ocean and the tossing of the vessel might render it useless in a moment.

But Giola placed the magnetized needle on a pivot, which permits it to turn to all sides with facility. Afterward it was attached to a card divided into thirty-two points, called rose of vents, and then the box containing it was suspended in such a manner that, however the vessel might be tossed, it would always remain horizontal—Electrical Engineer.

Stung. The old gentleman went into the parlor the other night at the striking hour of 10:30 and found the lights out and his daughter and a deaf friend enjoying a tete-a-tete in a corner by the window.

"Branceline," said the old man sternly, "this is scandalous!"

"Yes, papa," she answered sweetly, "it is scandalous because times are hard. Lights cost much money, and I said we would go along with the starlight."

And papa turned about in speechless amazement and tried to walk out into the room through the panel in the wall paper—Exchange.

The Difference. "Father," said little Bello, "what is the difference between farming and agriculture?"

"Well, my son, for farming you need a plow and a harrow and a lot of other implements, and for agriculture, all you need is a pencil and a piece of paper."

The Mess in the Oven. "How come such a great mess in the oven?" said a dapper old splinter to her maid of all work.

"Why," replied the girl, "the candles fell into the water, and I put them into the oven to dry"—London Tattle.

Mildew. An easy method of removing mildew from the room is to place a warm iron for a few moments and then brush it.

When you forget there are others who are suffering a burned bridge.

LATEST AFRICAN FASHIONS.

What the Dusky Beaus and Belles Are Wearing in the Jungle.

The amount of clothing worn by Central African natives would seem to favor the theory that the original incentive towards dress was not so much protection against the elements as the weather as the desire of personal adornment. Nearly all African races (says a recently returned traveler) wear dress of some kind. On a certain portion of the Congo, although cloth is plentiful, the women wear no covering at all; and, again, round Kisumu, the head of the Uganda Railway on Lake Victoria Nyanza, both sexes have recourse to adorning their bodies with the body which nature has given them, most race shave their heads and eyebrows, decorate their bodies with colored clays and vegetable paints, pierce their ears and noses, file or extract certain teeth, and turn much of their exterior into goodflesh. The latter is accomplished by making a whole series of incisions and inserting therein the juices of certain plants or minute pieces of wood, the effect of which is to make the skin stand out in relief not unlike an exaggerated, and sometimes exaggerated, exaggeration.

The shaven head, where no coiffure is worn, is like a smoked pumpkin, and the face, which is shaved, is like a far from pleasing; but I must confess, says the authority quoted, in the course of an article in Travel and Wonder, that the natives of the Congo, in these raised clutches, which vary indefinitely in design. A native "mode" at times, however, becomes exaggerated. On one occasion, in East Africa, I remarked in the lobe of a native's ear, pierced and stretched from the past, a small almost oval of recognition, an empty tobacco-pipe which I had shortly before discarded.

The natives of the Congo, according to race, but the main seat of strength, seeing that they carry on their heads, like rather in the back and neck than in the arms and legs. In his feet the native has retained in flexibility which undoubtedly is possessed by the whole human race in its infancy, and which we have probably lost by the adoption of shoes. The native's feet are something more than ours—mere balancing points. He can use his toes as we use our fingers, and on this point he is able to pass with uncommon where the European proceeds with caution.

ENGLISHWOMAN WON TITLE.

American Women's Golf Championship Captured by Miss Campbell.

Miss Dorothy Campbell, the British golf champion, won the final match of the American women's golf tournament recently at Haverford, near Philadelphia. Miss Campbell defeated Mrs. R. S. Barlow, of the Quaker City, who put up a good game, but fell down in the crisis. Miss Campbell won the title by a score of 11 to 10.

Of late years the King has been very careful of what he eats and drinks, and his dinner is therefore a matter of great importance. He retires for the night, however, and greatly enjoys a slice of cold beef, not too warm, and a glass of port wine, which he takes at a joint of this nature shall be kept during his visit.

His highness, the King, is a very fond of the sea, and he has been known to go on board of a ship, where he signs and receives the thanks of the crew for the entertainment that has been afforded him. He is also ready to give his autograph to any of his fellow guests who desire it.

There is a good story of Gen. Sir O'Meara, K.C.B., who is his way out to India to replace Lord Kitchener in the command of nearly 50,000 troops, and about 2,000,000 square miles of territory.

The general had an orderly who never seemed capable of understanding order, and Sir O'Meara, lost patience, and rapped out: "Why, you noodle, I don't believe you know what a rule is!"

"Trotle," as a rule, was the man's ready reply. And the general decided that he was not so stupid, after all.

Sir O'Meara Creagh is an Irishman from County Clare, joined the army forty-five years ago, and has been forty years of service in the east.

He won the V.C. in the Afghan War of 1878-80. In this war he was, on occasion, with 100 men behind the "engum"—a hastily constructed stone wall—when they were attacked by 1,500 men. It was night, and the brave officer, clad only in pyjamas, and accompanied by his native orderly, left the camp at midnight, with a couple of Sniders and many rounds of ammunition, and opened the bank of the enemy, and opened a rapid fire.

The rule was successful, and the Afghans, thinking they were really being attacked by a serious flank attack, retired.

The Bo'sun's Memory. On a certain occasion when George III. proposed to visit a place of war at Portsmouth, the captain, who was a religiously-disposed man, was shown into great consternation, and his crew or the officers under him should fall in proper respect.

The boatswain, though an invaluable seaman, was a particular source of fear; and knowing from the familiar habits of His Majesty that he would probably have something to say to each one on board, the captain called this man aside and informed him of the situation.

"Mind especially," said the captain, "that he must always be called 'Your Majesty' and never 'Your Highness'."

The boatswain seemed very tractable, and the captain was pleased; but his worst fears were verified when, on the King addressing him, he called out to the boatswain, "What a long time towards the captain, exclaimed."

The boatswain, however, hanged if I am not mistaken, said, "What did you say I was to call the old buff?"

A Saving in Bread. At a meeting of Baintree, Essex, Eng., Board of Guardians the master of the workhouse reported that since the board had permitted him to serve out bread to inmates as required, instead of supplying a uniform feed of 600 lbs. of bread per week, of two tons of bread per annum. During the eight years the system had been in operation 100 tons of bread had been saved from waste, representing in value $700.

The Libretto. "Pa, what is a libretto?" "A libretto, Aurelius, is a house for old jokes."

AN IDEAL GUEST.

British hostesses regard King Edward as an ideal guest. Far from being a stickler for form as was his mother, the late Queen Victoria, his Majesty is a very easy-going man, and is to be unduly emphasized when paying a visit. Indeed, it seems to be his aim to set the example to his hosts at their ease and to relieve them of any undue anxiety or worry upon his own behalf. When, for instance, he had his unfortunate accident at the house of the late Baron Ferdinand and Kothschild a few years ago by which he displaced a cartilage of one of his knees his first remark to those of his household who were about him was: "This is really too bad to come to a man's house and cause him all this fuss and annoyance."

In order to give his host and hostess as little trouble as possible the King makes it a rule never to be accompanied by more than one lady, and he is very particular to see that the Queen similarly limits herself with regard to her ladies in waiting.

His Majesty expects his incognito to be most strictly observed during these visits, and none of the guests may address him by his title; "Sir" is the proper mode of addressing him, and "Madam" suffices in the case of the Queen. No one, however, is well understood to the Queen without being first addressed by them.

Both their Majesties, however, make it an invariable rule to set every one at his ease the moment they enter a house, and always insist that the hostess should be at ease. Thus it comes about that those whose first experience it is of meeting the King and Queen in their personal capacity quickly lose something of the awe that at first oppresses them.

It is necessary, of course, to the entrance of His Majesty and to wait until he gives the signal for anyone present to remain seated. This, however, practically the only formality that is observed.

At dinner, of course, no one is drunk. It is customary for the King to take wine with the host and hostess and such other guests as it is his desire especially to honor. If the host be a member of either service, however, it is usual for him to rise and give the toast of His Majesty: "Ladies and gentlemen, the King! God bless him!"

Of late years the King has been very careful of what he eats and drinks, and his dinner is therefore a matter of great importance. He retires for the night, however, and greatly enjoys a slice of cold beef, not too warm, and a glass of port wine, which he takes at a joint of this nature shall be kept during his visit.

His highness, the King, is a very fond of the sea, and he has been known to go on board of a ship, where he signs and receives the thanks of the crew for the entertainment that has been afforded him. He is also ready to give his autograph to any of his fellow guests who desire it.

There is a good story of Gen. Sir O'Meara, K.C.B., who is his way out to India to replace Lord Kitchener in the command of nearly 50,000 troops, and about 2,000,000 square miles of territory.

The general had an orderly who never seemed capable of understanding order, and Sir O'Meara, lost patience, and rapped out: "Why, you noodle, I don't believe you know what a rule is!"

French Canadians Multiply. The Montreal Board of Health's report issued recently placed the city at the top of the list in the birth rate. The French-Canadian birth rate was 40 per 1,000 inhabitants during 1900.

Irish Can Walk. Fewer persons are reported in Ireland under age than in England and Scotland.

Dog Feeters Rabbits. A family of young rabbits are sharing the kennel of a collie puppy at Eubank, New South Wales. They were used for the purpose of guarding a kangaroo dog, but a collie intervened, and driving the other dog off, carried them to the kennel. There she is tending them as carefully as a mother her own offspring.

AT LAST

The ratepayers of Coleman have at last by an overwhelming majority declared in favor of proceeding with the work of incorporating Coleman into a town. The two meetings which have been held to discuss this question have not only been instructive but progressive. Even though there were some opposed to incorporation they showed by their speeches that they thought of Coleman as well as others. The Miner welcomed these meetings as hitherto there had been too much apathy on part of the ratepayers, public questions and we hope that greater and continued interest will be maintained in all questions relating to the public welfare of Coleman.

The vote shows conclusively that the feeling of the people is strongly in favor of Coleman and west Coleman becoming a town with larger powers and larger ideals. Incorporated as a town we can have a more definite end in view. The citizens will take a more lively interest in their affairs and the town of which we are all proud to belong. The vote is also one in favor of obtaining a greater water supply and a lamentably much needed sewerage system. It is to be regretted that Mayor Cameron was not present as there is no doubt that Mr. Cameron had something to say on the annexation of west Coleman.

To the ratepayers of west Coleman the Miner extends the hand of civic welcome. Let us both work in harmony.

AN INDUSTRY CRIPPLED*THROUGH SHORTAGE OF CARS

Can nothing be done for the miners and operators of the Crowns Nest Pass? The companies have plenty of orders, a large number of men are idle in the district and some of them are only getting a few day's work in a month. Why? I think it is because the C.P.R. either cannot or will not supply this district with the necessary number of cars.

The winter is now on us and some prairie towns are already fearing a coal famine, while our own miners are idle a large part of the time through the lack of transportation facilities. Here is a matter for the officials of the C.P.R. to take up. It is a fact that heavy orders are coming from the railroads of the United States and if these cannot be filled, the business interests of this district will suffer severely. This matter should be investigated by the Provincial Government and they should see that steps are taken to relieve the present situation. If not the railway commission should take up the question.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Now for a greater Coleman.

Cameron should not be opposed for mayor.

Another rung in the ladder of incorporation.

The old council should go back with increased majorities.

Is our member afraid of Duncan Marshall? Impossible.

The people of Coleman are determined to have pure water and lots of it.

Mr. Ross has not only called the bluff but he has raised the ante and it will cost the government $4,273 to see him.

The first copy of the Blairmore Enterprise is at hand. It is a newsworthy and well got up paper and abounds with advertisements.

There could be no better legislation brought before the house than that of making it law that mining companies must pay fortnightly. J. M. O'Brien should support this measure.

The British House of Lords, so long a part of the legislative machinery, is just about to be taken roughly by the throat and the people who stand by are not shedding any tears.

Upon investigation it has been found that there are 6,000,000 microbes to the square inch of the material in cess pools. And some of us wonder why so many epidemics break out.

Many school children suffer from constipation, which is often the cause of seeming stupidity at lessons. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets are an ideal medicine to give a child, for they are mild and gentle in their effect, and will cure even chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists.

PRESENTATION

Over thirty of the boarders and employees of the Coleman hotel gathered in the parlor of the hotel and surprised Mr. and Mrs. Murr. The occasion was a sure indication of the popularity and esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Murr are held.

U. N. Ross in a happy speech congratulated the genial proprietors and his wife and concluded his address by presenting them with a handsome silver tea service. This was presented by the boarders and employees. A. Cameron also made a speech in which he struck a happy vein. The gathering broke up with cheers for Mr. and Mrs. Murr.

DEATH OF AN OLD TIMER

Henry Kountz, who during the past few months, has been working on a mineral claim about a mile west of Coleman, was found dead by the yard crew near the Maple Leaf tippie on Saturday evening last. It is presumed that Mr. Kountz was startled by a passing train, he being very deaf and that the shock caused heart failure.

Mr. Kountz was an old timer and was kind and genial and much respected by all who knew him. The funeral took place from Knox church Frank to Blairmore cemetery on Monday afternoon. Rev. T. M. Murray officiated.

Cornelius F. M. Pinkney summoned a jury and adjourned the inquest which will be held at a time convenient to Attorney T. B. Martin, as the representative.

Henry Kountz was one of, perhaps, a half dozen still living of a party of argonauts who were the first white men to come to Southern Alberta. With others he came from California, arriving in the unorganized North West Territories in 1871. He lived the life of a wolfer, rancher, mountaineer and prospector alternately and participated in many thrilling experiences which befell the few white men of the early times.

DAVID DAVIES ENDORSES THE MINER

Coleman, Alberta, Nov. 19, 09.

Mr. Editor,

It has been the source of great pleasure to me to read your instructive letter, and also to know that you have taken mine in good part. I cannot but understand the responsibility and difficulty of a newspaper editor and how hard it is to be neutral, and free from the entanglements of any opposing contending parties.

The standpoint that you take in regard to the duties of a paper, are good. But I can't understand very well, "equilibrium between parties" because equal force of weight between parties do not promote peace and harmony, but strife and a continual discord because it means, equal strength, equal fighting power, aid to keep the balance even between them, makes it possible to endure and prolong an endless strife. Between contending parties, there is difference in motives and opinions, through the departure of one, from that what is right and just, one is always in the wrong and the other right, sometimes both are in the wrong, but both can never be in the right. If both would happen to be in the right, the result would be union, a bounteous element that lubricates the spindles of all worthy enterprises.

Your relation towards workingmen contains some kind of conquering force that appeals to the good and better nature of a person. My sympathy is kindled by this statement of yours because it throws a gleam of light upon to your sincerity, when your views appeared in the regard to the situation of the past, you might have erred, but we have erred too, our leaders have erred, and a stronger of us has a right to throw, but to make it our business not to err any more.

Your Attitude Towards Socialism

I wrote as a union man and not as a socialist. There is one thing that stands as a bar between myself and socialism, that is, the tendency that exists in their doctrine to down-trod religion, and their disregard of the Almighty, whatever may be their ideas concerning the welfare of the world, they can never succeed, nor bring any real benefit nor blessing to it, when seeking to gain the lower things, at the expense of the higher.

The Argumentative Attitude

I can see in this, the drift of your discourse. The old friction between Miner and the Ledger been very interesting and amusing as well. It has become under my notice and observation on more than one occasion, of rival paper and friendly editors.

I should like to point out one thing, that the Ledger, although it cherishes between its folds the socialistic element. But there were many a series of questions on the Sunday School Lesson which indeed are very instructive and helpful. Anything in that direction in the Miner would be beneficial.

I also enclose $2 to subscribe to the Miner.

Yours truly,

TALES OF THE CASCADES

CAMPING IN THE SNOW

CHAPTER VIII

Continued.

The sun was slowly setting early in the afternoon as it does in all mountainous climates, when the hunting party in Indian style fled into the camp. Mr. Japson declared they had better remain on the crest for the night as the ravines had already become darkened and treacherous.

The evening meal was soon over and the party retired to rest and again on the morrow they would resume the last steps of their journey.

The following morning broke with a mackerel sky. The seismic winds beat against the crests and precipices with threatening thuds, and the tossing boughs seemed to shake the shale-like soil. As they tramped and scuffed down the mountain trail many anxious glances were cast towards the sky and the heavy cloud that darkened the towering mountain across the Rosaline was leading with her rifle, while the rest were in the rear in advance of the well-tracked mule.

"Do you see those clouds Paul, said the engineer, as a fearful blast struck them?"

"Yes I fear we will have a storm that not infrequently visits these mountainous localities." As he said this Rosaline instinctively went back to Paul's side with the utmost confidence in his giant strength.

"Do you fear those gusts Mr. Netherby?" Hardly had Rosaline uttered these words than a desolated stillness came over the face of the whole mountain and valley. The great branches and boughs once so temptingly tossed suddenly recoiled into withering greenish clumps. The cloud on the opposite mountain rested.

Mr. Japson, who was now in the advance, trained his field-glasses on the lower part of the cloud. For some seconds he was engaged in a minute observation of the base of the entire mountain. Finally he withdrew his glass and stated that they must make great speed or a catastrophe of such consequence might occur.

Again the party sped on their way and passed with safety the last perilous precipice. Rosaline stopped and pointed out to Paul and her father that a cloud of dust had appeared near the base of the cloud.

A low rumbling intonation of unaccustomed sounds was heard only too plainly. The cloud of dust was violently carried away by the returned cyclonic wind. In the interval the party was forced to halt by the sight of a furious onslaught of rock.

As far as the eye could now penetrate massive grey boulders and shattered rocks were carried impetuously down the steep incline of the opposite mountain. Boulder and boulder rolled and collided until whole sprays of rock-dust were carried towards the anxious onlookers. The uproar was deafening.

The tall towering mountain was now an uneven heap of broken stones and fallen trees. The debris lay as if freshly drawn from an oven as the smoke-like dust was now rapidly rising and assuming cloud-like proportions. Soon like a veil it almost entirely hid the desolate scene from view.

For some moments the party stood watching the finishing work of the mighty tremor and then in silence they resumed their journey.

"I hope," said the engineer, "that none of that rock struck the trail that leads to the mine." "No danger at all Mr. Japson," replied Paul who had made a minute study of the surrounding mountains and valleys and who readily saw that from the angle of the incline that however violent the pitch the immense pile of rock could in no case be thrown towards the mine or the road leading from the lake to the mine. "The trails are all clear," said Paul.

Soon the three conical tents appeared in view and Mrs. Japson who had long been watching the approaching party through her glasses was out on the cross trails to meet them. The home greeting was most cordial and tears ran down Rosaline and her mother's eyes. After Mrs. Japson had greeted her husband and Paul she placed her arms around Rosaline and led her into her tent.

"Did the great slide frighten you mother?" asked Rosaline. "Well Rosaline I was a little nervous when the terrific crash of rock came piling as it did upon each other, and sending such great clouds of dust. But it soon subsided and I felt more at ease as I saw through my glasses that the

STORY OF A CROCK

"Please do not call till Thursday." This is what John Smith saw on the note deposited in the crock on the back door step when delivering milk early in the morning. It was written in a dainty feminine hand and it was in this way the Jacksons commonly noted their wishes to their milkman, they being of the lady-aided variety.

"These people are not fond of milk, apparently," thought John, and then, being young and inclined to sentiment he fell to wondering who the writer was.

Now, John had no intention of remaining in this business. He had no interest in cows, except that they made it possible for him to attend medical school, for his father insisted that he should work his way to success, so during the five months' holidays the embryo doctor was put on the milk route.

"Do him good," his father said. Then "he won't think of himself more highly than he ought to think." These young "muds" need a few lessons, not down in the curriculum. He'll be a bigger man for it, in more ways than one."

"Please leave fifty cents worth of tickets," was what John found in the crock a few mornings later.

"By George," mused John, "I like that writing. I wonder what she is like? I wish she would get up a little earlier. I would like a peep at her."

He left the tickets and put the note in his pocket. One morning the crock was not there. John was unusually attentive to business this morning. It would never do to allow them to be without milk.

He knocked once, twice, and at the third knock a movement inside the shuttered window and a soft voice called "Is it the milkman?"

"Yes," promptly responded John, "I did not want to leave you without milk."

"Oh, how kind and thoughtful. I forgot to leave the crock out. In a minute!"

John's heart palpitated. How was she going to get that crock out? Would he see her? Then the key turned slowly in the lock and the door opened wide enough for a shapely white hand and a lovely rounded arm to be seen. The hand and arm was all John saw. It was quickly drawn in and then he saw the crock. If John's father could have but seen the probability with which the milk flowed in to it he would have added "Practical Economy" to his supplementary course.

The next morning another note and an extra ticket. He had left a quart instead of a pint the morning before. "Conscientious, too. Grace of mind as well as body," murmured John, and his big heart swelled with tenderness as he thought of the lovely arm and the soft voice. He longed to see her, and scattering prudence to the winds he took a pencil from his pocket and wrote a few lines pleading with her to let him come to see her.

He planned it to the doorstep and catching up his milk can ran off to make up for lost time.

Now it chanced that Mrs. Jackson arose early one morning, having been unable to sleep and being seized with a magnanimous desire to surprise her daughter by having breakfast ready when she came up, she went out to bring in the milk, and finding a note pinned to the step she read it. Now, Mrs. Jackson was a very conservative woman. She had married a doctor, she was the daughter of a doctor, and she felt it was fitting that she should have a son-in-law in the profession.

"To think that Kitty should deceive me so," she moaned. "How long have you been corresponding with the milk man?" as Kitty suddenly appeared fresh from Slumber's regions.

A merry peal of laughter was Kitty's answer as she tried to grasp her mother's meaning. Mrs. Jackson handed her daughter the note. She read it, then laughed again. Visions of the milkman she had seen floated before her, the heavy-footed, rough-looking lads, scurrying into houses with their cans or driving furiously through the streets.

"Well, I shall dismiss him. I can not tolerate such insolence. I shall write him a note," said Mrs. Jackson.

Now Kitty was only a woman. She was curious and there was touch of romance in her.

Impact of the crash had taken a southerly direction. But I am overjoyed that you are all home. Let us go and meet Mr. Japson and Mr. Netherby."

GREAT DEVELOPMENT

IN LUNDBRECK COAL MINES

The great progress in the mines at Lundbreck is an augury of much commercial and industrial activity. For some time work has been impeded owing to unfair tariff rates and necessary development work. Happily the time has now come when both the mines are shipping daily and a large pay-roll is a fixed monthly asset.

As a result of this increased activity there has been a great influx of people who intend to become permanent residents. Almost as fast as men arrive they are engaged in the mines.

A new seam of coal has been opened up in the Breckenridge-Lund mine. This seam is from seven to ten feet thick and is of a high grade coal. Already large shipments are being made from it. This same company has done considerable prospecting to the south of the C.P.R. and it is expected from the excellent specimens shown that a rich bed of coal will soon be uncovered.

The Galbraith coal mine is shipping steadily and in increased quantities. Recently they have put in new screens at the leading tipple, which will greatly facilitate the handling of the coal.

The Lundbreck mine operators have been greatly handicapped by the recent tariff put in force by the C.P.R. and which places them in a position in which it is difficult to even fill their large orders on the prairie at cost. The Galbraith Company has already complained to the railway commission and it is expected that the C.P.R. will reduce their rates to the old standard on the first of January.

nance. Little did John Smith think when he stood at the back door the next morning, reading his dismissal written in a stiff angular hand, no friendly croak in view that a pair of lovely blue eyes were watching him, nor did he know that possession of said eyes went back to bed again with a strangely disquieted air.

ZAM-BUK CURED HERBABY

CONCERNING JOURNALISM.

Mothers will find the following statement of more than passing interest, showing, as it does, how Zam-Buk cured the skin diseases of children, even when ordinary remedies have completely failed. Mrs. C. W. Bowerbank, of 198 Denison Avenue, Toronto, says:

"Not long ago my baby's face broke out in an eruption. The spots would crack and be very irritating and sore. At other times they itched fearfully and caused the child to scratch and rub them, making the sores very inflamed and painful. I tried all sorts of ointments and salves but they somehow did not seem able to remove the trouble. Zam-Buk proved very different and a few applications gave the child relief. The sores are now healed completely."

"Since that time my little daughter has had occasion to use Zam-Buk for skin trouble. She broke out in blotches on her hands and arms, and in her case also Zam-Buk effected a cure."

"We now keep Zam-Buk handy as a household balm, and do not intend to be without it."

"Not only for skin diseases, but for cuts, burns and bruises, it is a fine remedy. The other day I burned my hand badly. An application of Zam-Buk seemed to take the fire out of it at once, and it was healed. In the course of my experience I have tried pretty nearly all the salves and ointments to come near Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk is Nature's own healing balm, being composed of pure herb essences. It is a cure for pimples and eruptions, eczema, ring-worm, ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, poisoned sores, cracked wounds, bad leg, piles, festering sores, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and Stores everywhere sell it, a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto; 3 boxes $1.25. You are warned against cheap and harmful imitations sometimes represented to be "just as good."

A good many people who think they have the courage of their convictions reverse the decision when they discover that their opinions may cost money.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Edmonton News Replies to Some Criticisms.

The Saturday News of Edmonton says:

When Lord Northcliffe addressed the newspaper men in Edmonton the other day, he urged that they should give more attention to imperial and international problems in their columns. Later Premier Rutherford told them that their papers were too severely local. Yet with all due deference to these distinguished men, the country publisher probably knew a good deal better than they do what the readers want. The perils of launching out too much on affairs of world-wide interest are well illustrated by the case of that sunniest of Sunny Alberta's journalistic guides, philosophers and friends, "H.D." of the Cabbage Patch at Beaver Lake, who writes for The Vegetarian Observer. In the last issue of The Observer he has this to say: "I can tell you there are quite a lot of Observer readers down in Renfrew and they are not satisfied with me. I don't give enough local items; I deal too much generally in metaphysics and philosophy. This does not interest them. What they want is to know what Jim is doing for his breakfast, who's sweet on who, and when baby cuts its first tooth. Unfortunately these events frequently occur outside of my knowledge. I would suggest to my neighbors that when anything of this kind should be brought before the notice of their eastern friends, (especially who's sweet) that they drop me a cable. One long, three short, one long, and down it goes."

If all the disquisitions of a general character that found their way into the country press were on a par with those which come from Beaver Lake, there would be few who would join the ranks of the vegetarians. It is not at Renfrew. But "H.D." is in a class by himself. The best part of most district papers, both for the local and the general reader, is that which has to do with the every-day life of the people.

CHIEF JUSTICE AS REPORTER.

Sir Glenholme Made Popular Reading of Infricate Case.

When one of the feminine reporters on the staff of one of Toronto's evening papers found herself some time since shunted for the occasion to Osgoode Hall, where she was expected to go and secure a story of what happened in court where an important case was being heard, she wondered how she would get along.

After she had been five minutes in the court she ceased wondering, for she realized that it was utterly beyond her. She did not understand what the lawyers were driving at, or what the judge was talking about. In short she felt that her life was a complete failure for the time being. She resolved to "stick it out," however, and tried to make notes, but the notes were mere absurdities. But she was not going to let the thing get away from her. When the lawyers were leaving, she plucked up courage and moved up to where Chief Justice Falconbridge sat on the bench. To him she gave a stated case but she did it in an unusual way. "I didn't really understand a word of what was said, and more than that, if you were to tell me all about it, I shouldn't understand it, I am sure," she told the chief justice.

Sir Glenholme Falconbridge was secretly much amused at this naive form of address.

"You even admit that if I were to explain it, you would not understand, eh—well, I'll see what I can do for you."

Whereupon the chief justice pulled a pad of paper towards him, took up a pen, and for the next twenty minutes engaged himself in getting up a "popular" account of the intricate court action. He finally handed it over to the young woman, bade her good-bye, and then hurried away to lunch.

The Last Spike.

A recent book contains an account of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the last page contains a story which may be repeated here. It is the story of the last spike of the C.P.R. The people of this country are a thrifty folk, the reason perhaps being that Scotchmen are numerous and influential here. He says that the ceremony of driving the last spike of the C.P.R. was conducted on economical lines.

The last spike, said General Manager Van Horne, "will be just as good an iron one as there is between Montreal and Vancouver. Any one who wants to see it driven will have to pay full fare." As a result there were very few spectators when Mr. Donald Smith, now Lord Strathcona, wielded the maul, and when the blow had been struck without any preliminary speeches or festivities the little party went fishing.

Elk Killed Old Doe.

One of the strange facts in natural history was exemplified recently at High Park, Toronto, when a buck elk attacked and killed with his horns a feeble old doe. This is always the custom with these animals, and some other classes. When the old ones become feeble and unable to keep up with the herd, they are killed off by the strong members of the band. The doe was about eleven years old and had been weak and feeble during the summer.

Married on the Roof.

Several thousand persons thronged the streets in front of the four-story building erected for the Dominion Trust Co. at Vancouver recently to witness as best they could the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Langor on the roof of the lofty structure. The wedding was the result of the couple's desire to signalize the creation of Vancouver's skyscraper.

Why Stanfield's Use Nova Scotia Wool

THE chief reason is because the Stanfields have never found any other wool that makes Underwear so peculiarly suited to Canadians.

The salty, ocean breezes and healthful climate, coupled with the rich grazing, give Nova Scotia wool a quality which is not found anywhere else.

Nova Scotia wool is perfectly blended.

It is soft and smooth, yet staunch and strong. It can be spun like silk and wears almost like steel. Garments, knitted of this fine wool, give the desired warmth and are not heavy or bulky.

It is no exaggeration to say that the Stanfields get the pick of the Nova Scotia wool. The founder of these mills did much to develop the sheep-raising industry throughout the Maritime Provinces. The farmers saved their best wool for him, and continue to send their high grade wool to the Stanfield mills.

Then, too, this wool reaches the mills in the best possible condition. There are no long railroad hauls—no lengthy journeys in the holds of tramp steamers. The wool is shipped direct to Truro as soon as sheared. Experts sort, clean and make it ready at once for its trip of transformation into Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear.

Stanfield's Underwear is made by the only process which takes the shrink out of the wool before the garments are knitted.

The value of this discovery—made by the founder of the Stanfield Mills—is shown by the growth of this business, which is now capitalized at $750,000.00 and employs over 300 operatives.

Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear is made in 3 standard weights—Light (Red Label), Medium (Blue Label) and Heavy (Black Label) and 17 other weights and qualities to suit the needs and requirements of every man and woman.

Had as Many Lives as a Cat

In a divorce case recently instituted in the circuit court of Baltimore the defendant's sworn answer contains the following paragraph:

"4. Answering paragraph No. 4 of the plaintiff's bill of complaint, this defendant says that he denies that he has treated the plaintiff with great cruelty, harshly and brutally or that he attempted to take her life, but on the contrary, says the plaintiff on numerous occasions has threatened his life, and on several occasions carried her threats into execution."

TO THE GRAND WORK DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE DOING

Fishermen Regard Them as a Boon to Mankind—Mr. Frank Banfield Tells How They Cured His Backache.

A Fearful Threat

From the classroom occupied by the toughest boys in the Sunday school came a great uproar. The secretary in the next room went in to investigate. Complete silence followed the opening of the classroom door.

"Have you got a teacher?"

"No."

"Then be quiet or you'll get one."

Result, comparative peace.—Manchester Guardian.

"My dear Miss M'Sidons, how you must adore your art! You seem perfectly wrapped up in it. I love to see you get upwards in that soulful way of yours when you come to particularly emotional passages. Are you seeking inspiration when you look like that?"

"Emotional actress—"Oh, no, I am counting the receipts in my gallery."

"I must warn you, dearest," he said, "that after we are married you will very likely find me inclined to be arbitrary and dictatorial in my manner."

"No matter," she replied, cheerfully. "I won't pay the slightest attention to what you say."

The Bachelor—"Is it true that you are an advocate of women's rights?"

The Spinster—"Yes."

The Bachelor—"Then you believe that every woman should have a vote?"

The Spinster—"Oh, no; but I believe every woman should have a voter."

"The servant that works for me must be very, very economical," said the boarding-house mistress to the applicant for work. "Oh! in such a case, mum," promptly returned the applicant. "Indeed, my last mistress discharged me for being that way!" "For being economical?" she said, with no clothes. "I used to wear blue."

Just Waiting

An old gentleman, rather portly and clad in a somewhat youthful suit of light gray flannel, sat on a bench in the park.

"What's the matter, sonny?" he asked a small youth who lay on the grass just across the walk and stared intently. "Why don't you go and play?"

"Don't wanter," the boy replied.

"But it is not natural," the old gentleman insisted, "for a boy to be so quiet. Why don't you run about?"

"Oh, I'm just waitin'," the little fellow answered. "I'm just waitin' till you get up. A man painted that bench about 15 minutes ago."—Pittsburgh News.

A Herford gentleman met an eccentric old squire of his acquaintance riding with only one spur.

"What have you done with the other spur, squire?" he asked.

"Why, what would be the use of the other?" said the squire, "if one side of the horse goes, the other can't stand still."

The manager entered the office, his face clouded, his brow wrinkled in angry thought. He called the office-boy. Regarding the youth sternly, he said: "Boy, do you smoke cigarettes?"

"I do a little, sir," stammered the youth. The manager fixed him with his eagle eye. "Then give me one," he said. "I left mine at home."

The Value of Physical Exercises For Beauty

LET any two women walk across the floor in my hearing," recently declared a physical culture lecturer, "and I will tell you blindfolded which are the ones who have looked after the health of their muscles and which have not. Those who have kept themselves in good trim will have a crispness of step which is unmistakable to the trained ear. Those who have not will have what I call the 'sloppy step'—a dull flop of the foot, or a drag, which is evidence as readable as Holy Writ that they have neglected the body at its most important point."

A careful watch of the expressions of one's own walk will testify to the truthfulness of this statement, and if at the bad times we look at our faces in a mirror we find notice that every feature of it looks as old as the hills is the walk seems.

From the mere point of looks, then, physical exercises are important, but to have any great value in that direction the development must be harmonious. In other words, the body must be taught to move and carry its various parts with perfect balance and equilibrium, and not show merely a bunch of hard muscles somewhere or other.

A healthful, and consequently graceful, pose of the body is the first thing to consider, and this improvement of posture must not be put off and on like the Sunday frock, but be habitual. It is best achieved by certain light exercises taken twice a day, but the constant thought, "I must stand properly," will go a long way toward effecting the desired end.

Any number of actual diseases, let alone grave ugliness of body, are said by physicians to be the result of standing or sitting improperly. To these ungraceful and harmful attitudes is often laid curvature of the spine, while, if not produced by long disease, they at least help to pave the way for it. Even crossing the legs while sitting or reading is said to be bad, as this very inelegant habit, compressing the arteries and veins, may cause rheumatism and paralysis. To have a footstool handy when sitting down for a long spell of work or reading will do much toward correcting this vulgar tendency. For it really comes from the fact that the chair is too high for comfort. Half of the ungraceful attitudes in which the feet are posed while sitting—such as wrapping them around the chair leg, or thrusting them forward—are also due largely to the unsuitability of the chair; for all persons cannot use chairs of the same height.

An excellent standing pose is sometimes taught young French girls with the following gymnastic drill: They are made to stand back against a board partition in such a way that the back of the head, shoulders, elbows, back, palms and heels press against it, at a given signal the girls wheel and face the board, when it is seen, if they stand correctly, that only the head and the tip of the nose touch it.

The lift of the chest caused by the two simple movements gives the chest space for lung expansion, and the head is held erect and proudly, as it should be. If children are made to practice this standing pose alone night and morning they would soon get out of the way of standing, sitting and walking, and the good results of the training would last them till the end of their lives. But nobody is too old to try to benefit from it, and, everything else unconsidered, it is a splendid help to the digestion.

Walking about the room on the balls of the feet while dressing is a fine leg exercise, and the following breathing and arm exercise combined will expand the chest, broaden the bust and correct round shoulders:

Let the arms hang with a dead limpness for a moment, withdrawing with a mental effort all force from them. Then lift the hands, place them palm to palm and interlace the thumbs. Then raise the hands straight up over the head, at the same time drawing deeply. Count five while the arms are in this position and hold the breath; then lower the arms slowly and exhale completely.

Repeat this exercise night and morning six times, and vary it sometimes by holding the breath at the time of lowering the arms and letting it out after they are down. These movements throw the nerve force into the finger tips, and if the exerciser takes the trouble to notice when she lifts her arms, it will seem as if she is drawing the ribs apart and giving all the internal organs more room.

An excellent exercise for filling out the hollows of the neck and throat is to rise upon the tips of the toes at the moment of drawing in the long breath already described. Then, still standing upon the balls of the feet, the exerciser must hold the breath while she counts fifteen, snoring at the same time, to direct its force against the muscles of the throat and neck.

Another good neck exercise is to move the head rhythmically from side to side, first one way and then the other, then backward and forward, and finally, around, from first side another another, in a circular way.

The sitting posture of the untrained body is generally as bad as the standing one, and the same exercises, simplified up stomach and concave chest even with the hardest sewing or writing. The spine should be held erect, with the back braced against the chair back if some support is felt to be needed; and if there is wear any bending done it should be in the hips and not at the waist. "It is treating the waist as if it were a joint which causes such aching backs and shoulders," declares one authority on this momentous subject; while all those who deal with the value of bodily exercises will affirm that each one, however far removed the movement may be from the legs, hips toward acquiring a graceful walk.

Smart Gown and Coat Styles—Late Freaks in Sleeves

FIG. D—PLAIN AND YOKED BISHOP.

FIG. C—A PRACTICAL AUTUMN COAT.

VERILY, as far as fashion is concerned, there is nothing new under the sun. However novel a thing may appear, one has only to look in the fashion books of vanished periods to find out that Madame Mode merely returns to her old madnesses. The burlesque basket hats which lately swept the feminine world off its feet were all reminiscent of the top-heavy headgear of the Directoire; and now-blessed be old ladies—here we are returning to the pin-back skirts of the Seventies, and to the sentimental sleeves which belong to the day of the "spencer" Bishop sleeves they are called, as they were then, and under this name the arm coverings definitely recall some revivals of a dozen years ago. For soft materials, these gathered sleeves, with their loose, lightly hanging puffs and pretty shoulder caps, are most charming and suitable, and as they possess a certain aesthetic grace, they doubtless will be much favored by this woman. Truth to tell, the thin woman has it still all her own way, for it is no use to pretend that the statue-like draperies of the dress and the chequered effects of medium dress are for any but wraith-like figures.

In the way of practical costume and ordinary walking dress the average woman is still considered, and as few women can afford the setting which goes with the more startling effects, perhaps the commonness of these is desirable. At any rate, the woman who is expert with her needle will find in many a new garment of sensible nature more than a suggestion for making over old clothes.

Except for the sleeves, which are smaller than these, many a coat recalls the lines of two winters or more ago, so if there is a loose coat in good condition on hand it may be necessary only to alter the arm portions. The jersey-top dresses likewise offer hints for the reviving of old gowns, for if there is a pleated skirt of hand, some silk or cloth in the wardrobe it will be easy enough to match the color with the gown, stockinging, and other accessories. The market is full of many a princess dress looks for all the world like a long tailed jersey with a pleated bodice sewed to the bottom, and at the join of the two portions a broad ribbon sash will often slip under sleeves arranged for the purpose and tie in a big bow in the back. This sash, newly appeared with late summer but if it takes more than a half season to establish popularity for

of goods would be required for the gown, and if the material is double width only six yards would be needed. Figure B. This combination of fancy bodice and yoke skirt is so suggestive of antiquated modes that it seems hard to believe that Madame Mode intends to present it as something entirely new. But such is the case, and if the cut-up effect of the dress is too trying for many figures, for others it would be smart and fine to a marked degree. The bodice or skirt could be used separately or combined, as shown to compose a frock for dressy afternoon or semi-dress evening service, or for many figures, for others it would be smart and fine to a marked degree. The bodice or skirt could be used separately or combined, as shown to compose a frock for dressy afternoon or semi-dress evening service, or for many figures, for others it would be smart and fine to a marked degree.

Figure A. This princess gown, if trimmed elaborately as shown, is suited to any handsome silk or cloth, while a plain back and skirt need a simpler material may serve it into something for every-day wear. For since the princess is so popular, it is vain to suggest that the smartness of the style should confine its use to the best frock. In the illustration ramie tulle, in a deep Autumn-berry red, shapes the dress, with a slight lace and soutache braid in the same shade. Linen and crash in these rich tints are quite adaptable for all-winter wear in the house, and if there is a long coat to cover the dress it may go until very late Autumn for street use.

But Henrietta and cashmere constitute, of course, more reasonable materials for a dress which requires as much work as this, and since braiding promises to continue its vogue such things ought be treated at the first to soutache instead of with the lace here used. In the material pictured, the frunk makes a most satisfactory dress with which to baffle the season, and, if liked, the dress may be entirely untrimmed and still look well, for the full neckpiece is swarming.

Anything so frankish, this low method of sash girdling will doubtless be seen for some time to come. It is too juvenile a fancy for any except young persons, and is far more suited to a smart dress than a practical one. The group of models displayed today suggest some of the mid-Autumn phases in gowns, coats and sleeves, and any one or all of them may be confidently followed by the home sewer. The medium figure is considered in the measurements given for material; and before I go any further pray let me assure my readers again that I shall be glad to answer any questions concerning dress in any department.

Figure C. Such a coat as this one can be utilized for motorizing, shopping, travelling, stormy weather, etc., and is topped as in the illustration with a smart and appropriate hat, the garment is suitable for any walking use. The coat is made of diagonal coating, with a military collar of velvet and buttons to match. Modern motor coats in this shape are sometimes made of plaid wools in striking colors, but for all round use the coat is best in a single tone and dark color. The model is a very easy one for the home sewer to follow, as the double-breasted fronts are fitted chiefly by the shoulder darts, and the back of the garment may be left to the sewer's taste. A three-quarter cut in the style is also permissible, though the coat is definitely smarter and more useful when full length.

As a double width goods cut to better advantage, I would suggest buying a 44 or 54-inch material, when, for many figures less than four yards would be required.

Figure D. The bishop sleeve in all its ramifications is here shown, any one of the models or any of them being especially suited to house dresses of every description. In the smarter more stylish group which shows three designs only, are displayed very graceful effect for tea gowns, flannel shirtwaists, and little dainty odd bodices in soft mulls or silks or laces. The sleeve with the cap and cuff could also be used for the most stylish cloth gown, and the combination gives ideas for the using up of materials on hand which may be in good condition.

The second group of sleeves displays the various methods of treating the bottom of the long shoulder cap and such wrist finishes as would go with the soft puff that hangs below it. Half a glance would tell anybody fairly gifted with the needle that sleeves in this style present unnumbered possibilities for making old sleeves into new. The cap and cuff should be of the bodice material, but any lace, net or in white or cream, would do for the puff.

Canned pears—Bartlett pears are considered by many housekeepers the best for canning. If not perfectly ripe, they can be easily ripened by wrapping them up in a woolen blanket; but they must be a little under rather than over-ripe for canning. To every quart jar allow seven or eight medium-sized pears, a pint of water, and one-fourth pound of sugar. Cut the fruit in halves, pare, core and throw it into cold water to prevent discoloration. Put the sugar and water in a saucepan and bring to a boil, then add the fruit and simmer for three to four hours.

Put a cloth wet in cold water, around the jar when putting in the hot fruit, in order to prevent breakage, and further secure against this by putting in a couple of pears and a little juice at a time. When the jar is full run a silver knife down the sides of it to let out the air bubbles, and seal tightly while the fruit is still hot. Canned pears should be kept in a cool dark place.

Soaked pears, which may be canned in the same way, are best when picked directly from the tree and canned as soon as they are ripe, both they and the fruit may be boiled for ten minutes or less before putting them in the jar.
